Vaigai Morning

The river woke slowly over Madurai.

Murugan walked with his grandmother along the bank. Birds called across the water.

He listened to every one. The oars dipped and rose in rhythm.

The fisherman smiled and offered them tea. It was hot and sweet and full of ginger.

By noon the market was loud with voices and colour. Everyone knew everyone here.